Everyone Needs Mandelbroyt for Back to School

No, really. And I'll tell you why.

I was reflecting on my previous post about Papa Ben's Mandelbroyt because the Jewish High Holidays are looming on the horizon. I was thinking again about Ben Lesser's amazing story and was happy to find that part of the holidays fall over a weekend, meaning it will be easier and plausible to spend it with family (sadly this is not always possible - we are very spread out). I find as I get older, the more I appreciate being around family (amittedly, those could be famous last words).

And then I caught wind of this -- thought it was tremendous and decided to tell you about it. Because here's a man who's already giving back and doing something great out there in the world but he just had to do more. He is giving organizations an opportunity to fundraise with his product. You can contact them for a unique promo code and moving forward, earn 30% off each order placed with it.

I've done a lot of fundraising in my day. CPK, Baja Fresh, Islands... 30% is a really high rate of return and it's such an amazing thing he's doing anyway, seemed worth sharing.

So yeah, I think everyone needs Mandelbroyt for Back to School. Get some.

And because their generosity knows no bounds, the kind folks of Papa Ben's Kitchen have promised to send a variety pack of Mandelbroyt to one lucky reader! Enter below:

Entry #14 Melanie K.

Do you run giveaways, too? Try Rafflecopter! It's free.

Do you advertise? Promote your brand w/ Rafflecopter.

P.S. Added fun because when I found this I smiled - Plugin that adds Jewish holidays to your Google Calendar because admit it, no one ever knows when the heck they are, amiright?! Free to download! :)

FTC Disclosure n' Stuff: I coaxed Papa Ben's nice PR lady to send my raffle winner some Mandelbroyt once I their name and address confirmed. You're welcome.

New pens and notebooks. I know everyone goes electronic but a tiny Moleskin and a pen is still cool in my book.

A little hazing at the new job. That's fine, guys. Just know I enjoy a good revenge prank. Gauntlet thrown.
